As we approach the end of our study of Covenantal Theology and Dispensational Theology, we are going to look at the value of interpreting Scripture through a dispensational rubric. We'll also notice just how little support there is in Scripture for the rubric of Covenantal Theology. These differences really do matter.

Quotable: When you get to your wit's end, you'll find God lives there.

The April edition of GPS, by Rick Shrader, is available on the table under the mailboxes. This is the former "Aletheia".

*The Saviourhood of Christ ~
Man's thoughts ought to be governed by God's Word, and his ways regulated by God's revealed will. But the converse is true. So the things which are of great price in the sight of God (1 Pe 3:4) are despised by the fallen creature, and "that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God" (Lk 16:15). Man has turned things topsy turvy, sadly in evidence when he attempts to handle divine matters.*
